- To serve but not to deserve
- To give but not to take
- To help but not to harm
- To honor but not to dishonor
- To empower but not to exploit

3. The context: Unlike Social sciences students, science students rarely get the opportunity to Interact with the people and learn about their problems. However, there is a need to inculcate social values to lead responsible social life; this practice aims to incite the habit of serving and sharing the problems of others especially socially disadvantaged sections of the society like orphans, HIV children, senior citizens, and differently abled people. Therefore, we have started the practice of staying and spending quality time with them so as to send a message that let humanity be advanced in the society.

It gives them opportunity to perceive the problems of unloved and undermined sections of the society. We have started this practice in 2017 and continuing the same till date. As a part of this practice, a group of students from our college regularly visits "Snehalaya" which is a home for the orphans, HIV children, and senior citizens, and differently abled people. Before going to the snehalaya, students contact care takers of the snehalaya to set out the items required for the inmates in the snehalaya. A Voluntary fund was raised to purchase the items and those items shall be given to meet their needs every year. Apart from this, a group of students stay along with them to do a voluntary service like taking part in washing the utensils, cleaning the surroundings, washing their clothes, helping them in feeding the food. In addition to it, our students also counsel them and psychologically motivate them to pursue their dreams. Some of our students also involved in teaching the various school subjects. They mentor some orphans students and regularly monitor their progress and also helps them to as better citizens.

- 5. Evidence of success: When we have started the practice of visiting the snehalaya and staying along with them for few days, very few people used to visit and help them. Later on, they themselves saying and witnessing that the number of people who are donating rice, and other groceries have increased. Also, more number of people has started celebrating their Birthdays at the snehalaya to invigorate with positive vibrations; we were successful in promoting the services being rendered to this organization by various stake holders.
- 6. Problems encountered and Resources required: The main problem which was encountered. While visiting and staying in the snehalaya was the stigma present in the mindset of the even educated people like our students. Their parents were afraid of sending the children to this snehalaya where HIV patients and stereotypic behavior orphan children. But we have convinced the students and their parents to come forward in sharing their problems by caring for them.

The main resource required was fund raising to meet the daily needs of the inmates present in the snehalaya. Our students have gathered some funds to donate some amount annually to meet their needs. We also encouraged other people to celebrate their joyful
